Coast Day 2019: Stockton University

Closing Reception:

Third Thursday -

Thursday, February 20th

5:00 – 7:00 pm

Stockton University's Atlantic City Coast Day is an annual public education and outreach event. The goal is to provide information about the coastal zone for people living in and around Atlantic City. It is on a barrier island with a lot going on, both oceanside and bayside.

The 2019 Coast Day event took place on Sunday, October 13th at the Stockton University Atlantic City Campus Academic Center at 3711 Atlantic Avenue. At Coast Day, many celebrated the beauty and wonder of New Jersey coastal zones and ecosystems. This free, open to the public event presented a variety of public, private, and non-profit organizations with information, displays, and demonstrations. There were also vendors, games, a wave flume, and a touch tank. The family-friendly event also featured interactive exhibits, art, and lectures by local experts.

To highlight the artistic talent of our community, the event featured a pop-up gallery and artist competition. A call for artists was sent out by

Shari Tobias, Plastic Ocean Gown, First Place

Jill DeFelice, Are You Ready for Your Close-Up?, Second Place

Dr. Elizabeth Lacey, Stockton Associate Professor of Marine Science, requesting submissions based on the theme of “Coastal” for judging during the Coast Day event. The winning pieces, along with a selection of other works by the artists, are featured in this month-long exhibition.

Congratulations to the winners from the 2019 Coast Day Pop-Up Gallery and Art Competition!
